BONN, June 21.—Chancellor Willy Brandt plans to call an early national election next fall to hreak the West German parliamentary deadlock, sources in Mr. Brandt's Social Democratic party said today. The most likely date, they added, is Nov. 26. Mr. Brandt has publicly said only that he will personally make a decision at an appropriate time, uninfluenced by outside factors, on whether or not to seek early elections. But Social Democrats who attended a toplevel party meeting in Munich last weekend came away convinced that the decision has already heen made.

Normally, new elections would not come until the fall of 1973. But defections from Mr. Brandt's Social Democratic party (SFD) coalition partners, the Free Democrats, have effectively erased the 12-vote majority he started out with in 1969.

Most of the defections occurred over Mr. Brandt's controversial "Ostpolitik," or policy of rap-prochement with the Communist states of East Europe.

Budget Stalled

There is at least one pressing reason for an early election: Mr. Brandt has not been able to get his budget for 1972 through parliament yet. Recently he suffered the embarrassment of a tie vote and a defeat for the budget for his own office.

The constitution permits a government to operate until the end of the year without an approved budget, provided that it does not exceed the budget of the previous year. But the first five mouths of the year brought a 13-percent increase over the 1971 rate of

Senate Passes Modified Child Care Bill

By Marjorie Hunter

WASHINGTON, June 21 (NYT) .- The Nixon administration won major concessions yesterday as the Senate passed a modified bill creating a vast network of day care centers and child development services. The vote was 73 to 12

President Nixon had veloed a broader bill last year, protesting that it was characterized by "fiscal irresponsibility, admin-istrative unworkability and family-weakening implications."

As modified by the Senate, the new bill seeks to overcome the President's key objections. However, the administration has not yet said whether the new version would be approved by the Presi-

Indeed, some of the modifications tailored to avoid a second presidential veto may have made the bill unacceptable to key backers of pending child care legislation in the House and a major fight between the two bodies is likely to develop. In its major concession to the administration, the Senate agreed, 45 to 38, to limit sharply the number of potential prime sponsors of child care centers by giving states equal footing - with local communities in competing to run such programs. Under the bill vetoed last December, the secretary of health, education and welfare would have been required to give priority to local-community applicants: submitting satisfactory plans. The effect of the Senate action yesterday would be to rule out most small or even mediumsized communities as sponsors. The present secretary of HEW; Elliot L. Richardson, has said he feels that no community of under 500,000 population should operate a program on its own. Those units of government chosen as prime sponsors would set up and administer the child care centers and programs, either on their own behalf or by contracting the job to nonprofit or groups. The issue of local or state prime sponsorship is certain to be the major point of dispute in the Rep. Carl Perkins, D., Ky, chairman of the House Education and Labor Committee, insisted last year that the bill permit communities of at least 5,000 to become prime sponsors.

In still another concession to the President, the revised bill would provide a much slower start in setting up child care centers by delaying until July of next year the authorization of actual operating funds. The bill vetoed by the Presi-

Democratic Convention Rules Upheld by U.S. Appeals Court

By Warren Weaver Jr. WASHINGTON, June 21 (NYT).—A U.S. Court of Appeals overturned last night a day-old federal judge's decision that had threatened to undercut the Democratic party's efforts to reform its national nominating

The effect of the unanimous decision by the three-judge panel was to reinstate the key guidelines that require state delegations to the 1972 convention to include more women, blacks and young people. The guidelines had been declared unconstitutional Monday by Federal Judge George L. Hart jr. in a ruling on a case brought by Alderman Thomas E. Keane of Chicago, a close political as-sociate of Mayor Richard J.

If last night's Appeals Court ruling is not reversed by the Supreme Court, the convention's Credentials Committee can continue with its plans to start deciding 54 delegate-slate challenges beginning next Monday. More than three-quarters of these challenges are based on the disputed guidelines. More challenges, based on late primaries, are possible.

In a four-paragraph opinion, the Appeals Court held that the challenge brought to unseat Mr. Keane and 58 other Chicago delegates had not yet been decid-

U.S. Mayors' Convention Backs President's Policy on Vietnam

NEW CRLEANS, June 21 (AP).—A U.S. conference of mayors voted today to back the President's policy in Vietnam. An impassioned, shouting appeal for it by Mayor Richard Daley of Chicago had been greeted by cheering and footstomping. By an overwelming majority in a hand vote, the mayors voted not to reaffirm the position—taken for the first time last year of setting a specific date for withdrawal from Vietnam Mr. Daley, red in the face, gestaring in the air, called on the mayors, "In the name of God, stand behind the President.

No one would work harder against a Republican President than me." he said. "But maybe I'm old-fashioned or behind the times. The question is whether we are going to stand behind the President in foreign affairs." the President in foreign affairs."

A group of large-city liberals had attempted to reaffirm last year's position, changing the withdrawal date from Dec. 31, 1971, to Oct. 1, 1972, and adding the condition that the withdrawal depend on the release of U.S. prisoners of war. That proposal was presented to the conference by Mayor Thomas Luken of Cincinnati, who said, "This is not the time to water down our resolve to get out of Indochina."

Says Vietnam War Is Major Obstacle

MOSCOW, June 21 (UFI).— With the way nearly clear for a European security conference, the Soviet Union turned its attention eastward today and renewed its call for a collective security pact in Asia.

An article by Viktor Mayevsky. a leading commentator for Prayda, the Communist party newspaper, pointed out that Chins had agreed long ago in principle to such a pact. The major remaining obstacle was continuing American aggression in Vietnam, he said.

"The creation of the security system which would specifically confirm inviolability of the frontiers and renounce force is clearly not in the interests of certain circles in some countries." he said.

Mr. Mayevsky said Soviet in-terests were "linked geographically, economically and politically not only with Europe but also with Asia." Such a pact could stem either from bilateral or regional treaties, he said, eiting Soviet treaties with India, Egypt and Iraq as possible

Diplomatic sources termed West Germany's ratification of its nonaggression pact with the Soviet Union the last major hurdle to the European security conference long sought by the Kremin to stabilize boundaries

Howard Johnson, 75, Restaurateur

NEW YORK, June 21 ONYT). Howard Dearing Johnson, 75, founder of the Howard Johnson Co., which dots the country's landscape with the familiar nrange, son-bine and white modified-colonial roadside restaurants, died yesterday at Lenox Hill Hospital

At his death Mr. Johnson was no longer the active head of the compan, which is publicly owned. It is headed by his son, Howard B. Johnson, 39, who is president, board chairman and a director. In 1924 after serving in France in World War I, Mr. Johnson took over his father's cigar-store business, which was heavily in debt. He was then 27. Mr. Johnson's rise to fame began with his idea of making quality ice cream in 28 flavors. Years later he remarked, "Tve spent my life developing scores of figures, and yet most people still say. I'll take vanilla." When he decided to sell franchises, he carefully controlled the stores' design and operations and added such favorite foods as fried clams and chicken made up in central kitchens and frozen in single portions ready to be heated. He retired in 1959, and the enain, under his son's direction, is continuing its ascent, with volume close to $200 million annually.

The Howard Johnson Co. said it has more than 460 motor lodges and restaurants in the United States, three outlets in Canada and one opening shortly in Mexico, but in no other foreign countries.

Restauror Aiding 'Propaganda Agencies' KGB Arrests Pyotr Yakir, Most Active Soviet Dissident

By Robert G. Kaiser

The Soviet security police (KGB) today arrested Pyotr I. Takir, probably the single most active member of Moscow's tiny band of political dissidents.

Mr. Yakir, 49, is the son of a ramous Red Army general who was executed by Stalin in 1937. For several years, he has openly provided information to Western correspondents in Moscow on colitical trials, disaldent protests

Mr. Yakir's arrest is not sur-Mr. Yakir's arrest is not sur-prising in light of the political police's attitude toward active dissidence. Most of his original comrades are in prisons and camps, or have completed their sentences and have given up political activity. Mr. Yakir's friends say he has long expected to be arrested himself, and that he thinks he avoided it so long. only because he had a famous father.

Mr. Yakir's arrest lends support to a theory widely held among Western specialists on among Western specialists on Soviet affairs that the Soviet Union's movement toward détente in international affairs would be accompanied by a tightening up at home. In other words, the regime would seek to show the public that relaxed international tensions do not mean any relaxation of domestic ideological vigilance.

Despite the apparent failure of the dissidence movement to attract a significant number of open adherents. Mr. Yakir has always described himself as a "psychological optimist." He Yakir would be quickly brought thought that if he could spread the news that a few Soviet citizens were speaking their minds and defying the authorities, this would embolden others.

"The Volca of America and the British Broadcasting Corp. are our bullhorns," he sald in one interview last year. "Our joh is to get as much information to the West as we can. Then It comes back 'by shortwave radio broadcast) and people in the Urals and Siberia know about it. They may never know me by name but they listen to the information I send."

Every Opportunity Mr. Yakir was so active in disseminating any dissident majerial he received that some other Soviet citizens who could also be called dissidents would not confide in him. Other Russians regard Mr. Yakir as too bold and

He certainly never avoided an opportunity to speak out. His last public statement was prior to President Nixon's visit here, when he said:

"One would like to think that after the visit of Nixon the reac-(political) arrests will be stopped and nobody will be taken to insane asylums. It is time to put an end to the Middle Ages." If Mr. Yakir's arrest deprives the dissidents of an active leader. it does not end the phenomenon of open non-conformity in the Soviet Union. Alexander L. Solzhenitsyn, the author, remains the leading symbol of intellectual nonconformity, and something of a hero to Soviet intellectuals who tions, though not personally prepared to risk career and freedom to speak out.

Russian intellectuals agree with apparent unanimity that the dissident activity of the past six tears has not had any measurable effect on the great mass. of Soviet citizens.

If the dissidents' principal cause—more personal and intel-lectual freedom in the Soviet Union—has any future, it is with the next generation. Whether the young people of this country are inclined to try to change the rules of the Sovict society remains a mystery. One of the charges against Mr.

Yakir, his friends said today, will be that he organized young peo-ple, including his own daughter. Irina, to help him in his activi-

Crisis Averted as Knesset Defers Vote on Divorce Bill

JERUSALEM, June 21 (UPI).-The Knesset temporarily averted a government crisis today by ting to defer action on a bill that would legalize civil marriage in Israel for persons who cannot wed under Jewish law. Premier Golda Mcir opposed the legislation.

Following a stormy hour-long session, the Knesset deferred a vote on the bill backed by two of the government's four political parties and thus checked the gravest cabinet crisis affecting Mrs. Meir since the rightwing Gahal hior resigned from the government in August, 1970.

Uri Avneri, leader of the small Haolam Hazeh party, afterward tried to reintroduce the bill in bis own name to force a showdown vote on the issue, but the Knesset maintained its earlier stance and blocked his effort by a 55-7 vote, The legislation, bitterly opposed by the National Religious party, was expected to be reintroduced when Mrs. Meir returns from Vienna where she was scheduled to go tomorrow for a 10-day visit. The bill was proposed by the Independent Liberal party and

Air Industry Hopeful on Anti-Hijack Moves

By Richard Witkin

NEW YORK, June 21 (NYT).--Monday will not go down in history as "the day the airliners stopped." There were too many places where the shutdown called by the world pilots' organization did not materialize, including most of the United States and all the Communist world except

But it may nevertheless prove a day to remember. It may mark a turning point, many knowledgeable observers believe, in the ef-forts of the international aviation community to gain control of the menace of air piracy.

While cantioning that there will be no overnight miracles, that undoubtedly there will be more incidents of bijacking and extortion, a majority of experts are highly encouraged by these considerations:

 In going through with the work stoppage, partial though it was, the world pilots' group gave themselves a new level of credi-bility for future threats they might make. That credibility had been at a low point because numerous past threats, similarly provoked by air piracy, had not been carried out.

 Monday's vote in the International Civil Aviation Organiza-tion broke a protracted logiam in efforts to buttress with enforcement machinery the existing conventions against hijacking and sabotage. These efforts have been led by the United States and Canada. Negotiation of the enforcement machinery is expected to be a long and difficult process.

• Yesterday's consensus vote in the United Nations Security Council calling on UN members take "effective measures" against air piracy was, at least in part, a direct response to demands of the pilots' group. It did not go nearly as far as the pilots wanted, but it mened the door to further UN action. • The pilots' fraternity in the United States has been showing increasing signs of militancy, despite the contrary impression generated by its inability to shut llown more than 10 percent of U.S. airline operations Monday. Such militancy is seen in a recent expression of willingness to cooperate more actively with the Federal Bureau of Investigation in overpowering hijackers. It is try hy dramatizing the need for more vigorous anti-hijacking also seen in a relaxation of pilot reluctance to carry defensive measures, and should have been supported.

Optimism and Bilterness

The mood of optimism should become stronger after the pas-sage of time has allowed dissipation of some bitterness over the large-scale collapse of American participation in Monday's demon-The more statesmanlike ration-alization for that collapse is that pilots are working for law and order on the airways and could not, therefore, defy court injunctions. But that does not explain why pilots of United Air Lines, the nation's largest carrier, informed the Air Line Pilots Association long before the court injunction that they would refuse to join the stoppage. Mission Incredible

"As always, should you or any of your force be carght or killed, the secretary will disavow any knowledge of your actions. This tape will self-destruct in five seconds ... good luck ..."

From the CBS-TV show. "Mission Im-

As an example of life imitating art-of 2 sort-we have not for some time seen anything like the Watergate caper now unfolding in weird and scarcely believable detail. right down to the taped locks, the rubber gloves, the tear gas pens, the array of electronic equipment, and the crisp new $100 bills in the hands of the five men who stole into Democratic party headquarters the other night under cover of darkness and something less than impenetrable aliases. 'Mission Impossible" it wasn't; experts in these matters all agree that the job was bungled at almost every step of the way. "Mission Incredible" it certainly is, both in terms of execution and, more important, in terms of the motives that could conceivably have prompted so crude an escapade by such a motiey crew of former Central Intelligence Agency operatives and Miami-based, anti-Castro activists.

Ron Ziegler, the White House spokesman, has already dismissed it as a "third-rate burglary attempt" and warned that "certain elements may try to stretch this beyond what it is." The implication of that last statement is that he knows what it is and if so, we wish he would tell us, because frankly it doesn't shape up as your ordinary, garden-variety burglary-however "third-rate" its execution. An attempt to implant electronic surveillances in the headquarters of a major political party strikes us as something much more resembling what the Democratic national chairman, Lawrence O'Brien, has called an "act of political espionage." And that, for all its comic, melodramatic aspects, is not quite so easy to dismiss.

In fact, without wishing to stretch things one bit beyond the demonstrable facts, there are certain elements here which could raise questions in even the least suspicious or skeptical minds. This is, for example, an election year, and while it is possible to suppose that this deed was done by a foreign government or even some extra-terrestrial interest, the finger naturally points, in a time of intense and developing political combat, to the Democrats' principal and natural antagonist; that is to say, it points to somebody associated with or at least sympathetic to—we may as well be blunt about it—the Re-

We do not so allege; we merely note that this is what some people are going to be saying, or thinking, and that their speculations, dark as they may sound, are going to be encouraged by word of various connections between several of the suspects and one part or another of the Republican power structure. For example, James W. McCord, one of the five men arrested, has worked on security problems both for the Republican National Committee and the committee for the re-election of the President. Two of the group had in their personal effects the address of a Howard Hunt, another former CIA agent, who serves as a consultant to White House consultant Charles W. Colson. Other more tenuous links have been developed between the arrested suspects and elements of the Republican party

John Mitchell, the former attorney general who is heading the committee for Mr. Nixon's re-election, has stoutly denied any knowledge of the affair as has the chairman of the Republican National Committee, Sen. Dole, as well as Mr. Ziegler, So life has imitated art up to a point; the "force" has been "caught"; "the secretary" has "disavowed any knowledge" of its actions. What remains now to be seen-what is, in short, the crucial question in a time of waning confidence in the processes of government-is whether a Republican administration can bring itself to use every means at its command to prosecute perpetrators of the Watergate raid. From the sound of it, there would seem to be an abundance of evidence in the captured equipment and freshly-minted currency. It ought not to be left to the Democrats to dig into "Mission Incredible" by pressing their civil suit. In short, this particular tape ought not to be allowed to self-destruct.

Podgorny's Promise

Peace in Vietnam is not around the corner, but an early resumption of serious negotiations in Paris, the prerequisite, should now be possible. With its sea supplies cut off by the American blockade, with China obstructing Soviet land shipments and with both its major aliles putting their relations with Washington above their ties with Hanoi, the North Vietnam government is under increasing pressure to explore a diplomatic settlement.

The United States has posed two conditions for a return to the semi-public four-party Paris talks: A halt in the North Vietnamese army offensive in South Vietnam, particularly the drive across the Demilitarized Zone. and an indication that Hanoi would negotiate seriously in private. Hanoi's minimum conditions for resumption of the private talks appear to include resumption of the semipublic peace conference and suspension of the bombing of North Vietnam, at least in the Hanoi-Haiphong area.

From this it is evident that mutual deescalation of the war is the best route to resumption of serious negotiations. President Podgorny's promise, after leaving Hanoi, that the Soviet Union "will do everyting possible for a de-escalation of the Vietnam war" and the success of the Paris peace talks, which he said would resume soon, suggests that Moscow is willing to take a hand in helping the two sides clear away negotiation roadblocks. The Soviet Union has been loath to commit its prestige to such an enterprise since the advent of the Nixon administration. Soviet reluctance to become involved during the past three years undoubtedly reflected Hanoi's attitude, culminating in the Communists' attempt to win a military victory instead of to resume negotiations, and sensitivity to criticism by China, which had been opposing negotiations until last year. President Nixon's insistence on progress toward settlements in Vietnam, the Middle East and Berlin as the price for a Strategic Arms Limitation pact may also have turned Moscow off, along with Soviet doubts about Mr. Nixon's real desire to end the Vietnam war.

But now much has changed, Agreements on Berlin and strategic arms have been reached. A Vietnam settlement would further ease relations with the United States and help speed American trade and credits. Peking no longer is opposing a negotiated settlement. Soviet leadership may now be convinced that the United States is in earnest about wanting to end involvement in the * * *

Mr. Nixon's May 8 peace proposal-American withdrawal in four months in return for a cease-fire and release of prisoners, leaving a political settlement to the Vietnamese-no longer demanded North Vietnamese withdrawal from the South, implied that North Vietnamese gains in the spring offensive would remain in Communist hands during the cease-fire, and avoided any explicit commitment to the future of the regime of President

Comments by North Vietnam's chief Paris negotiator, Le Duc Tho, suggested interest in the proposal even before the Podgorny visit to Hanoi. The first need now is to get the talks started again. With Soviet help evidently forthcoming and a lull under way in the Communist offensive in South Vietnam, a suspension of the bombing of the Hanoi-Haiphong area could well open the door to fruitful negotiations.

International Opinion

Time for Peace Talks?

Negotiations in Paris could resume soon. but one question remains still: Has Hanoi decided this time to talk with other than weapons? Precident Podgorny tried to convince the North Vietnamese leaders that their interest today is to accept a cease-fire and the opening of decisive negotiations. Did he succeed? It'e likely, since he said, on his stop at Calcutta, that "everything went as I wanted. I'm very satisfied with the

And, in Peking, Henry Kissinger will be concentrating on the intentions of Le Duc Tho. He will learn-partly-what the North Vietnamese diplomat's suitcase will contain the next time they meet. At least, one can hope now that real negotiations will begin. -From L'Aurore (Paris).

PARIS-Two girls of easy morals, Emilie Paulin and Juliette Bitche, quarrelled yesterday evening at a bar in the Rue de la Butte-aux-Cailies over a love affair, and decided to settle the question at issue with knives. In the presence of several friends, says the Figaro, they fought savagely in the Rue Bobillot until one of them, Paulin, had received three dangerous wounds, of which one was in the throat. She was taken to the hospital, the others disappeared.

Nixon Telling Hanoi the Time for Talks Is Now

By Max Frankel

WASHINGTON.—The briefcase W that Henry A Kissinger took on his Peking visit is bulging with position papers on everything from the suitability of baskethall for diplomatic ping-pong to the cash-and-carry possibilities of some hig Chinese-American trade deals. But there is not much mystery about his overrid-ing interest: Vietnam. Mr. Kissinger's continuing purpose in Peking, like much of President Nixon's purpose there and in Moscow earlier this year, has been defined on many occasions by Mr. Kissinger and the few other informed administration officials. It has been to enlist the Russians and the Chinese in an elaborate exercise, both diplomatic and military, to persuade the North Vietnamese that the summer of 1972-meaning the weeks between now and Labor Day—is the optimum time for negotiating an end of the war.

A Vulnerable Saigon

The argument, in essence, is that Mr. Nixon's terms for a deal will be more generous now than ever again because he would like to enhance his chances of reelection. When pitched in reverse, it is a suggestion that the President feels more vulnerable on the war issue now than he has ever before or will ever be again and that Hanol should try him out, as it tried out Lyndon B. Johnson's terms in 1968.

The corollary argument is that North Vietnam should also feel more tempted to settle for less than before because its military supply lines have again been crippled and its major allies seem much more interested in pursuing better relations with the United States than in taking serious risks to bail out a struggling ally.

The reverse side of that coinage is that Hanoi's armies could be arrested only because of extensive American help for the South Vietnamese and that the end of American military activity in Indochina will leave Salgon vulnerable to the North's maneuvers for many years.

So the President wants Hanol to calculate that it can accomplish many of its objectives in the long run if it will help him look good, or at least save face. in the short run. And he wants it to reckon that the only alternative is to expend yet more lives and treasure with the real risk that he will be re-elected for another four years of bombing and mining and military aid to the Salgon government.

Mr. Nixon, having withstood the greatest onelaught of which be deems the North Vietnamese capable in the foreseeable future, is asking that they deal with him now that he too needs to dealor risk having to deal with him in a much stronger position in long-term success in any case. What the President has wanted all along from the two giant Comminist nations is some help in persuading the North Vietnamese that they can trust the American President to hold out for little more than his sense of honor in retreat. At best, from the American point of view, the Russians Chinese are offering such advice in the current round of jetborne diplomacy.

It is doubtful that even the President and Mr. Kissinger can be sure of the manner in which that advice is being rendered. They almost certainly know nothing yet about how it is being received. For the North Vietnamese have emblazoned in their memories another summer of negotiations, in 1954, when the Russians and pressed them to settle Chinese for half a loaf-and half a country—with the mistaken promise of more later. Moreover, they remember having had totopple a French government to get that far, and they must Getting the parties to the table believe that they deserved the credit for toppling President Johnson and forcing President tion men from battle. So it is taken for granted here that another round of serious negotiations will occur, and soon.

under those circumstances at least to feel each other out before they abandon diplomacy alto-gether—will not be difficult. Mr. Kissinger has long predicted an intense round of bargaining for this summer, and the Soviet president, Nikolai V. Podgorny, was not taking sides when he promised to help arrange a favorable climate for the talks.

The central issue of trust remains—especially frust in the terms of future competition for political power in South Vietnam. Mr. Nixon has said the United States will end all acts of force for a supervised cease-fire and the return of prisoners. Hanoi has offered a deal only if it obtains a share of power-the lion's share, Mr. Nixon fears in Salgon.

Hanoi wants the United States to shandon President Nguyen Van Thieu and his closest associates. Washington sees that as tantamount to the destruction of the South Vietnamese Army, the only effective non-Communist force in the country. Technically, there is some middle ground between the positions, but how far each side moves into that middle ground depends less on diplomacy than on psychology, more on emotion than on jet-plane com-

Sacking and Saving Italy

By Giorgio Bassani

OMR-In Italy, nature and history are so closely related that it would be impossible to separate the two. Land in its natural state is practically nonexistent in Italy; throughout the country, nature has been remodeled or at least marked by works of man over the ages. The farmlands in Italy have prevalent characteristics and structures which very from region to region, while the villages are nestled in hills and the monasteries, churches and castles punctuate plains, mountains and coasts. All of these landmarks form an organic whole-a chain of naturalarchitectural events which until a few decades ago unfolded practically unaltered from the Alpine peaks to the sea.

Fragile State

This fusion of nature with human intervention is evident in all its beauty, variety and coherence. But the miracle of this equilibrium manifested Steelf as such just at the time when it had begun to be destroyed-first sporadically and then systematically. The start of that destruction came in the past decade, simultaneously with economic and industrial development.

There was the disproportionate a delay. Had Miss Davis chosen to be tried within the above men-

Economic development cannot be stunted. The temptation to destroy-more in the name of simple speculative drive than of planned progress -is overwhelming.

The problem consists of imposing limits on the intrusion, in particular of approaching it rationally with recognition of our natural and historical heritage. Laws in Italy already exist for this purpose. Some need improvement and others need to be added. But the problems of saving green areas could not be limited . to the cities. In 1962, the committee to save green areas was formed. It immediately dealt with the other aspect, that of the national countryside, which had been brought dramatically to public attention by building speculation in the Abruzzo National Park. A law to protect national parks was presented to parliament. So, too, an effort is being made to save our coastline and prevent the trend to tirn the coast into private property.

We have been able to relocate the Zelo Buon Persico oil refinery near Milan, and another refinery that was planned near Erice, in Sicily. The pine forest of Migliarino, the most beautiful on the Tuscan coast, was saved from speculation because of continued

As it is, her debut yesterday was in "Giselle," her most famous role. We had already admired her in it before she defected from Lentigrad's Kirov Ballet, and there have been glowing reports from the States of her appearances in the same work with American Ballet Theater. Expectations at Covent Garden therefore ran high. They were not disappointed. From her first entry, circling the stage in high airy leaps, Makarova immediately confirmed her position as a great romantic ballerina and an outstanding Giselle.

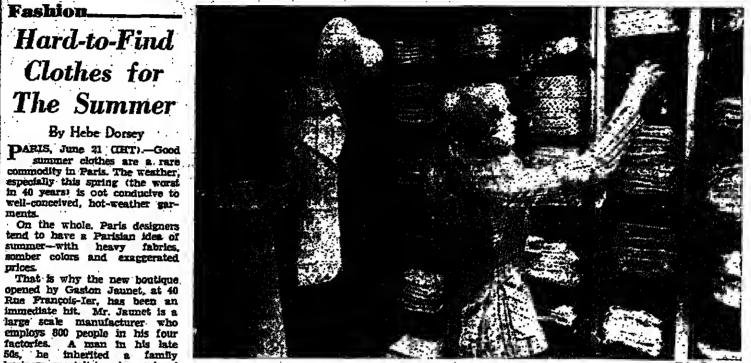

She is lucky to have the right sort of face—oot conventionally beautiful but youthful and expressive, with hints of tension suggesting a ner ous temperament which makes Giselle's later madness completely convincing. Her footwork is silent, essential in romantic ballet but rare in these days of heavily blocked shoes. She can control her turns at unusually slow speeds or accelerate her spins into a dazzling coda. (John Lanchbery, who conducted, was masterful in adjusting tempos to suit her, a practice which may be anathema to some musicians but which is well sanctioned by tradition— Pavlova demanded the same thing from her conductors).

It would be possible to fault Makarova's dancing here and there, as it is possible to fault nearly all great artists, and some people found her mad scene intelligently studied rather than moving. Her little embarrassed giggle when asked by Bathilde if she is engaged ONDON, June 21 (IHT).—It may well have been the proverbial is a sensible idea that seems slightly contrived in practice. But Ill-wind which prevented Natalia Makarova from making her I am glad that she does not overdo the mime, as many Giselles do, debut with the Royal Ballet at a gala last December. On that occa- and that she ignores the scenario printed in the program, which sion she was only to have danced two pas de deux, which might says that she kills herself, and prefers to die more romantically of a broken heart.

Her second act, with its breathtakingly fast opening solo and its effortless lifts, looking like period prints, is exemplary. Makarova was magnificently partnered by Anthony Dowell, though there is not yet quite the magnetic rapport between them that Fontern and Nurcyev achieve. It is difficult to watch anyone else when an artist of Makarova's magnetism is on the stage, and it is proof of the way Dowell's stage personality has strengthened in recent years that he was never eclipsed. His Albrecht looks sufficiently couthful for his irresponsibility to be forgiven and his bearing in the second act is suitably poetic and noble. His dancing matched Makarova's in lightness and elegance.

The whole company rose to the occasion, especially Deanne Bergsma as the Queeo of the Wilis and Michael Coleman and Ann Jenner at the head of this production's version of the peasant pas de deux. And an occasion it certainly was, and one that I hope will be remembered as the opening of a new chapter in the history of the Royal Ballet. For the moment Makarova is only scheduled for one mor "Giselle" and two "Swan Lakes." hut the Royal Ballet needs a regular prima ballering of her quality and Makarova needs a permanent home in the nearest setting to the Kirov that the Western world can provide. Judging from her guarded remarks at a press conference last week, Makarova would like to settle here, British ballet-goers would like that too.

Any day of the week, the place does a brisk business. Pat Law-ford bought a couple of blazers the other day and Annahel Buffet is another good customer.

The secret of Jaunet's success is basically the same es that which makes American sportswear great. Jaumet delivers clothes that are delightful because one can wear them a season and go on to something else the next year. Summer clothes should not represent a heavy investment anyhow. They should be fun. Shirts start at 49 francs and end at 79, for the most extravagant silk ones. Pants range between 60 and 100 francs. The most expensive blazer (in an exclusive and handsome geometric print) is 260 francs. There is a large raoge of flowered and striped blazers at 150 francs.

Finally, unlike many young and peppy boutiques in Paris, Jaunet understands that many women are fighting the battle of the bulge and sizes range from 6 to 16.

With this success on his hands, Jaunet, who already has another boutique in Saint-Tropez, plans to open 30 more next year, both in France and in European capitals.

. WHEN EVERYONE COPIES AN IDEA IT MEANS THE IDEA IS GOOD...

Twenly years ogo we storted the "Boutique" with its own ariginal Von Cleef & Arpels creations, ond all at "Boutique" prices.

At that time it was the first "Baulique" of the kind. To-day it is no longer the only one, but this hos not diminished its success.

We are now opening a larger and even more beautiful Boutique than before... with a very special collection created for this very special occasion.

...THE IDEA WAS SO GOOD, WE HAVE BEEN FORCED TO EXPAND.

You won't find our biggest asset on our balance sheet

One glance at our statement of condition will tell you a lot about Security Pacific Bank's financial status. Överthelastthreeyears, forinstance, we've shown a growth of three billion dollars. And in 1971 our assets passed the nine billion dollar mark.

But the one thing you most need to know about a bank is the one thing a column of figures won't show you.

Its most valuable asset of all. Experience. We got ours in California.

One of the world's fastest-growing economies.

For over a hundred years we've followed California's phenomenal expansion, in every aspect of its economic life, from industry to international trade. And we've grown ourselves. To be one of the ten largest banks within the USA. And financial partner to 90 of America's top 100 corporations.

So when it comes to mediumterm Euro-currency loans we're in a rather special position to understand your problems. Because we know about expansion. At first hand.

Although our head office is in Los Angeles, our international network covers the most important financial centres of the world, from the Far East to Australia, from South America to Europe. Last year alone we opened five new offices outside the USA.

Each one of our international offices has a working inside knowledge of the economic climate of its own country. But it also carries through the imaginative approach to banking that California's dynamic economy has taught us.

When you do business with us, for instance, we act fast. Because we know that any delay in drawing up a contract may mean loss of opportunities and money for you.

And once we've arranged financing we'll continue to counsel with you. To make sure you get the best possible return on your investment. Because when you borrow money from us, you're borrowing something special.

Our most valuable asset of all.\
Our hard-earned experience.

Citing what he said was the threat of "economic dictatorship" from a growing concentration of business power, he said that the powers of the Securities and Exchange Commission should be broadened, and its staff enlarged, so that the agency would have 'original jurisdiction over all ele-ments of the institutional investment community,"

Rep. Patman, chairman of the House Banking and Currency Committee, told a conference of bank trust managers here that "it is my intention to give them (the SEC) broad supervisory powers, when necessary—to control and direct investments."

In response to a question, Mr. Patman said that "it's not coutemplated" that the SEC should have the power to allocate investment resources, but then he quickly added: "But if it would make the situation better, I'd be willing to include it."

Throughout the meeting, Mr. Patman sounded populist themes that have been his calling card through more than four decades in Congress. He laced his speech with a long list of specific proposals-some already pending in his banking reform act, and others due to be embodied in legislation to be introduced shortly. Hearings would be held visers as the government reported the largest overall increase in living costs in three months. Despite a drop last month in food prices, higher clothing and transportation costs boosted the consumer price index to 124.7 for May, up 3 percent.

But the report from the Bureau of Labor Statistics said that price hikes in the last six months of the President's Phase 2 controls program were lower-at a percent annual rate-than in the half-year preceding imposi-tion of controls. The latter rate

White House press secretary Ron Ziegler, however, said tho nation's economy was moving on a healthy path" though "somo problems" etili existed. Later today, the Commerco Department reported that now orders for durable goods, a key indicator of industrial activity, slipped 0.5 percent in May from the April level to a seasonallyadjusted $33.41 billion. This was a sharp reversal of the upward-revised 2.2 percent gain in the previous month.

At a news briefing following the announcement of the price Index rise, Marina Whitman, a member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers enid that "we're very concerned at the recent increases in wholesale food prices which will show up in the June consumer price

She said the Price Commission was meeting today to consider clapping price controls on raw agricultural products, one of a number of options the government was weighing. Sho said, however, she felt it was possible to achieve the administration'e goal of cutting the inflation rate to below 3 percent a year by Dec. 31 without further food price

"We aren't there yet," she said, citing the 3.5 percent annual inflation rate during Phase 2, "but we feel we're on the way."

President Nixon moved forward from tomorrow to this morning a conference yith his top economic aides to consider the long-range direction o fthe nation's economy this election year. The meeting included Treasary Secretary George P. Shultz, Pederal Reserve chairman Arthur F. Burns, budget director Casper Weinberger and chief presidential economic adviser Herbert Stein Mr. Ziegler said the President was pleased at the economic trends. "The indicators that have been released and what we base our judgment on shows that the American economy today is enjoying a strong recovery in employment," he said, ". . . and on the production side a lower rate of inflation than in recent years."

N.Y. Beset by Unfavorable News

By Vartanig G. Vartan NEW YORK, June 21 (NYT).— Prices on the New York Stock Exchange, losing some of their earlier strength, ended on a mixed note today. The Dow Jones industrial average roso 3.29 to 951.51, but declining issues outnumbered the gainers. Weighing upon market psychol-

Blue Chip Winners The Dow index had its chare of winners. Westinghouse rose to 50 3/4 after management forecast record results for 1972 and the likelihood of a dividend in-crease at year-end. Chrysler, up 7/8 to 32 1/8, registered its gain despite fractional declines for both General Motors and Pord. A brokerage house with an important institutional following updated its earlier "buy" recommendation for Chrysler. Both General Electric and Eastman Kodak rose 1 1/2, Kodak, closing at 129 3/4, traded at 130 1/2, its highest price ever. General Foods, up 1 1/2 to 26 7/8, continued to rebound from its re-cent 1972 low, which it had reachglamour issues closed lower. Mc-Donald's, the restaurant fraachiser whose name has become virtually synonymous with the hamburger, slipped 1 1/4 to 59 5/8. This followed the public secondary offering of 558,656 shares at 60 7.8. Kresge fell 2 1/8 to 120 3/4. Officials told the annual meeting that Kresge, whose shares sold below $4 on an adjusted basis as recently as 1963, will show a slightly lower pre-tax profit margin this year as compared with 1971 because of Price Commission

Curtiss-Wright, a speculative favorito in the recent market, dropped 2 1/8 to 47 1/2. Also hit profit taking was ite class stock, down 5 to 59 as tho Big Board's blggest percentage loser. FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

Krupp Expects to Match '71 Results Fried, Krupp GmbH expects this year to at least match its 1971 consolidated group profit of 18.05 million deatsche marks, itself down from 109.6 million DM in 1970, chairman Guenter Vogelsang reports. Consolidated 1972 sales should be et least as high as the 7.44 billion DM in 1971. During the first five months of 1972, sales in the steel, metallurgical and trade sectors are below 1971 levels, but Mr. Vogelsang notes that order activity in the eteel sector has increased in recent weeks. Citing rising costs, difficulties in the export market and a very slow expansion in the capital goods sector, he says it will be difficult for the group to show an improvement

Hawker Siddeley 'Quite Good' '72

Hawker Siddeley Group Ltd. expects "quite a good year" in 1972. Sir Arnold Hall, chairman, says he would not give a firm forecast because of the overall industrial situation, but adds there are "firm signs" that government reflationary measures are working their way through the economy. "Our order book is going up." he says.

Montedison '72 Sales Unsatisfactory Montecatini Edison reports higher production and sales in the first four months of 1972, compared with the like 1971 period, but labelled the 738.9 billion lire (about $1.3 billion) in the January-April period, np 4.6 percent from the previous year. While disclosing production figures, Montedison noted that synthetic fibers production rose 11.9 percent, well below expectations. In the pharmaceutical sector, in which Montedison owns the two largest Italian groups (Carlo Erbs and Farmitalia), the sales volume was unchanged

Cunard, P & O Join Forces

Cunard and the Peninsular & Oriental are planning to join forces in the North Atlantic pessenger runs from the United States. The two companies are among Britain's oldest and largest shipping firms. Cunard will continue to serve U.S. ports with the Queen Elizabeth 2. P & O will put its flagship, the Canberra, on the same routes, including cruises. Cunard will undertake eastern U.S. marketing for both lines and any other activities this cooperation might entail. Both lines had been reported negotiating a merger but nothing came of these talks. Edited exclusively for the investment industry pro, "The Money Manager" is a complete, single source of financial intelligence. The Money Market, the Government, Municipal and Corporate Bond Markets, the Stock Market, the Mortgage Market, Foreign Finance, the Economy, developments in Washington and throughout the world-all these, and much more, are explored weekly by "The Money Manager" to show you what is really going on in the world of finance.

It is organized around an expert staff of financial editors and reporters, a fine Washington Bureau, a staff of financial specialists in leading money centers abroad, and a distinguished group of contributing experts.

"The Money Manager" monitors daily the major market makers in the world's leading financial centers.

In separate reports every week, it informs you in depth of developments in each sector of the money and capital markets, domestic and foreign. These objective reports give you a complete grasp of the whole market structure...let you see what is going on outside your own area of interest...reveal the effects, or possible effects, upon your own activities.

"The Money Manager" monitors and reports fully on all the peripheral forces influencing the markets. On the Washington scene, it reports not only the action being taken in Washington but the thinking-and the shifts in the thinking—of the Administration, Congress, Federal Reserve, Treasury, and other sensitive centers in the Capital. .

The nation's monetary policy is followed closely for clues to the Fed's thinking relative to the supply of money and credit, open market operations, etc.

The nation's fiscal policy is explored in depth—with analyses of the budget, taxes, Federal spending, and the Treasury's debt management.

The economic outlook is surveyed on a continuing basis, with penetrating analyses of production and spending patterns, business expansion or contraction, employment trends, and other vital economic yardsticks.

On the international front, "The Money Manager" reports in detail on foreign financial and economic developments—with emphasis on the Common Market Group, Japan and Canada, their monetary and trade activities, and the impact of their interest rates on our own markets.

Whatever has a bearing on the financing and invest-ment climate is fully explored and progressively followed. All is organized and laid out for you in discerning, accurate reports, supported by essential financial and economic statistics in convenient tables and graphs.

For those whose business is financing and investment, this kind of comprehensive reporting is critical-becauseit goes to the very heart of daily decisions and long-term financial planning. It is even more true for those removed. from the money centers-because without such an "upclose" view there's a serious lag in understanding what is really going on, and this can be costly.

"The Money Manager" is another highly specialized publication of The Bond Buyer, which has been providing essential services to the financial community since 1891. As a part of that organization, "The Money Manager" has access to all its news gathering facilities, its long-established sources, and its own nationwide news wire.

Every week "The Money Manager" looks at the markets and the world of finance with your special problems in mind—sifting and reporting fully only what is of interest to you as a professional. It eliminates duplicate reading and conserves your time.

Mailed on Friday, "The Money Manager" comes to you when it can be most useful—at the beginning of the week. On your desk the first thing Monday, it enables you to start the week with a fresh appraisal of the latest developments and an invaluable insight into what's ahead.

BRIDGE,

By Alan Truscott

THE Dallas Aces were in their best form last weekend when they bilized the strong British team 20 to 0 during the 4th World Contract Bridge Olympiad in Miami Beach. On the diagramed deal, Bob Goldman and Mike Lawrence bid aggressive. ir to a game that might have been beaten by inspired defense.

When East bid one diamond, Goldman as South jumped preemptively to two hearts, reckoning that the favorable vulnerability was sufficient compensation for the lack of a sixth card in his suit. West showed spades, and Lawrence put on the pressure by hidding four hearts, It was too late for East to introduce clubs, and West doubled on the strength of the missit in diamonds. A club was led, and East won with the ace. If he had stopped to consider what could have motivated his partner to double, he might have reached the right conclusion and made the diffi-cult play of returning a small diamond for his partner to ruff. He would eventually have made the ace-queen of diamonds to defeat the contract. Notice that the diamond ace followed by a diamond would fail, because South would eventually discard a diamond from dummy on the club king.

In practice, East did not draw the delicate inference that his partner should be void in dismonds, and returned his singleton space. Dummy won, and finessed the heart queen, cashed the ace, and made ten tricks without difficulty. He lost two diamond tricks as well as a club trick, since the club king took care of dummy's diamond five.

West missed a chance to make a fine fake-card. When South timessed in trumps, West should have dropped the jack, to convey the impression that he held a singleton. The declarer might then have thought it right to lead a spade to dummy, plan-ming to finesse again in trumps, and if he had done so he would have gone down at least one

In the replay, the East-West bidding was less aggressive, and Bob Harran found himself playing four chibs from the East position. A spade lead could have besten this, but South naturally led the ace of hearts, a suit his partner had supported. The Aces gained 12 international match points on the deal.

For it is his thesis that there has been a great shift of responsibility in the runctioning of our government, and that the wrong men, the military are looking after matters that should be the concern of the civilian arm. He is not interested in locating individual culpriss. In his opinion it is the system that is to blame, if it allows one agency of government to dom-inste the thinking of others to the point that frequently no other alternatives are considered. The time has come, he believes, when we should scrutinize the results of that influence with a more critical eye, and this book is his contribution to that scrutiny.

Some of the book may seem elf-evident, after one has read it. The qualification is important because the value of his paper is to provide an overall view of what has been happening the past 25 years. A lot of disparate material takes sensible shape. Puzzled citizens may not be better off after reading this volume, but I think they'll feel a little less lost.

After a protest by black athletes, the AAU announced that Van Reenen and South African distance runner Johan Halber-stadt would not be permitted to compete "because South Africa has no reciprocal agreement that lets Americans compete in their championship meet."

White Flags Flying

defense budget of $55 billion is ever adopted, we might as well throw in the towel and spend a billion dollars for white flags which we will hoist all over the world. On the basis of past performance of our defense contractors, one billion dollars for white flags is a wholly unrealistic figure, and Mr. Laird knows it.

Buchwald This is what might happen if the Defense Department let it be known that it was planning to contract for white flags to fly around the

WASHINGTON, D.C., April 30, 1973.—The chairman of the House Armed Services Committee announced today that the Lockheed Flag Company has been given a $1-billion contract to produce 500 white flags for the Defense Department. The chairman denied that the fact Lockheed Flag was located in his district of Swampville, Louisiana, had anything to do with the company's winning the order.

SWAMPVILLE, La., July 14, 1973.—The president of the Lockheed Flag Company displayed a prototype of the WF1 (White Flag One) for the press this morning. The president said the WFI would outperform any white flag now flying. It would be an allweather flag which would fly at night as well as during the day, and could stand gusts of wind up to 100 miles an hour. Lockheed Flag said it hoped to have the WF1 in production in 10 months.

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif., June 15, 1974—The first WF1 was tested here today and Defense Department officials announced they wers very pleased with the results. The WF1 flew at an altitude of 23 feet for three hours. Although it showed some fabric fatigue under stress, Lockheed Flag engineers said the damage was minimal, and easily could be repaired.

SWAMPVILLE, La. Sept. 2, 1974—The president of Lockheed Flag announced today that due to increased labor costs, fabric fatigue and hikes in flagpole ropes, his company would not be

WASHINGTON. - Secretary of able to fulfill its WF1 contract Defense Melvin Laird has for $1 billion. He said he was suggested that if Sen. McGovern's asking for a supplementary $300 million, which was still a bargain for the country.

> WASHINGTON, D.C., Dec. 16. 1974-The chairman of the House Armed Services Committee said he was recommending the $800million overrun for the WF1 as the security of the nation was at stake. He also said he was adding $100 million extra for Christmas bonuses for Lockheed Flag executives.

ANCHORAGE, Alaska, March 8, 1975-Two WFIs crashed to the ground yesterday and Pentagon investigators suspect the wooden flagpoles used to fly the white flags were at fault. Termites were found in both flagpoles, and the Defense Department has grounded all WFIs until a new aluminum flagpole could be de-SWAMPVILLE, La., May 11, 1975—The president of the Lock-heed Flag Company said he would need another $1 billion to replace the flagpoles in the WFL. He said it was the Defense Department's insistence on wooden flagpoles that caused the overrun, and he would need the money immediately if the white flags were to be delivered on schedule.

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 12, 1975 Sen. William Proxmire called the WF1 the biggest Defense Department bungle of the year and suggested the contract be cancelled.

Testifying in front of Proxmire's committee, the president of Lockheed Flag said that if he doesn't get $1 billion immediately, his company would go bankrupt and not only would this create a hardship for its stockholders but it would put 35 people out of work.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Sept. 11, 1975—Congress, at the urging of the White House, voted today to give the Lockheed Flag Company $1 billion to complete work on the WFI and also lend it another $1 billion to develop a new multiwhite flag project which could fly six white flags from the sams flagpole at the same time.

The Battle of Clipperton

PARIS (IHT).—It is perhaps under-standable that a group of private citizens like the Ocean Life Research Foundation, anxious to subtract themselves from the overwhelming attentions of established governments, should seek untrammeled sovereignty over a couple of coral reefs barely poking their heads out of water (Time, Tonga and Minerva, IHT, June 19), despite the opposition of the king of Tonga (voice from the wings: "Tonga?"). But it is harder to comprehend why two powerful nations should bother to contest the possession of a fragment of rock barely more considerable. Yet two such nations did, lengthily, for the dispute lested from 1897 to 1931, 34 Acara.

The adversaries were the United States and France, and when the question was finally submitted to King Victor Emmanuel III of Italy for arbitration, he awarded the disputed island to France, which promptly forgot about it. No doubt you could embarrass the French administration of overseas territories today by calling it up and asking for the latest news

Clipperton Island lies in the Pacific about 650 miles west of Costa Rica. It is only 3.1 square miles in area and 15 feet above the water at its highest point but one. In a storm, waves wash all over it. The only thing a person unlucky enough to be caught on Clipperton in such circumstances could do would be to climb the single 62-foot pinnacle of rock on its southeastern edge and hang on until the wind abated. It is understandable that it was only inhabited once, and then by misadventure. Clipperton is an island that only a mother could love and today it seems inexplicable that anyone should ever have wanted it. Actually, nobody did. The French and the Americans didn't want the island, they only wanted its guano.

Promoter

For something like a century and a half after its discovery, nobody showed any interest in Clipperton, which seemed to have been created expressly to prove that, romantic ideas to the contrary, an island can be unlovely. Then a French promoter, undoubtedly on good terms with his government, decided that he would like to have a go at the guano, so France announced in 1858 that it was taking Clipperton to its bosom. So far as I can find out, the Frenchman thereafter lost interest, and the guano remained undisturbed until an American company deposited 30 Mexican gnano gatherers on the island, thus inflicting grievous injury on the sovereignty of France, which went to court about it.

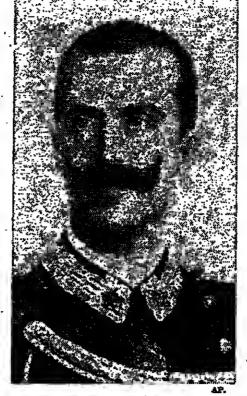

This kept Clipperton alive in the minds of 2 few international lawyers, but not in those of the managers of the American company which had given Clipperton its population of Mexicans. The Mexicans had the idea that they would be picked up at the end of the summer and returned to some spot where it would be unnecessary to indulge in rock climbing for survival Unfortunately the Americans simply forgot about them. Thirty years later a ship happened to sight Clipperton by accident, and found three survivors there, two women and a man. They were removed, and Clipperton has since remained uninhabited, with one possible exception which, frankly, I don't believe, but will cite in a moment just for the record.

Meanwhile, the World Court at The Hagne had been deadlocked for years in an attempt to decide whether France or the United States was the rightful owner of Clipperton, a difficult question, since neither of them had any real claim to the place aside from a desire to lay hands on its guane. The British, if they had been cooperative, might have settled the argument by claiming it for themselves, for Clipperton is named for the British navigator who discovered it in 1715, but, after having looked it over, decided not to bother to annex it for the king. His judgment was confirmed by the British, an Empire-wise people who wanted no part

Arbiter

Exhausted, the two adversaries finally agreed to accept Victor Emmanuel as referee, and he ruled for France. The French then discovered that the unfortunate Mexicans had exhausted the guano deposits before being marcomed. France had the island, but the United States, foresightedly, had already removed the guano-Clipperton's sole attraction, if attractiveness is a quality of guano, France has since given no thought to Clipperton unless you count two visits by the training ship Jeanne d'Arc, in 1933 and 1951, probably to see if the island was still there. and, if so, to assert its inslienable Gallic character, perhaps by replacing a tattered flag, if there was one there, by a fresher

It is in a French source that I find a reference to the possible second occupation of Clipperton. It is alleged that it was used by the United States (which, Victor Emmanuel dirit, had no right to be there) as an aviation base during the last war. Americans seem to have no recollection of this, and the question which rises antomatically in my mind is: How? I do not know if the United States pleaded before the World Court or Victor Emmanuel that it needed Clipperton to protect the Panama Canal, but I rather doubt it, since the claim would have been so wildly implausible. True, Clipperton has a lagoon encircled by a sandy beach, a cosy refuge for a submarine or two, if they could have been squeezed into its eriguous embrace, but unfortunately the lagoon has no entrance from the sea.

A seaplane if there are any seaplanes left, might have settled on its watersexcept that they are fully occupied by five small islets known as the Eggs (which would have been of no use to submarines either). Offhand, I should think the only sort of aircraft that could land on or take off from Clipperton would be a helicopter, and the military usefulness of helicopters 650 miles out in a piece of the Pacific Ocean used only by fish escapes me.

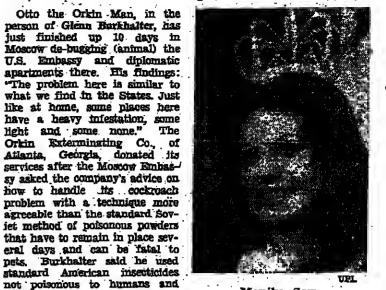

: I should not like it to get around that I consider myself a reasonable facsimile of Victor Emmanuel, but I have a suggestion to offer about Chipperton. Why doesn't France sell it to the Ocean Life Research Foundation? This ought to make everybody happy, including the King of Tonga,
